This isn't a galaxy united under a single banner; instead, it's a tapestry woven from countless alien races, each with its own unique culture, technology, and political ambitions. Some are technologically advanced empires, others are fledgling civilizations still grappling with their own internal conflicts. Some are peaceful, others aggressive. We witness the initial engagement from multiple perspectives—the soldiers on the ground, the political strategists behind the scenes, and the innocent civilians caught in the crossfire. This multifaceted approach underscores the devastating human (and alien) cost of war, even at its earliest stages. The chapter skillfully blends action
