Chapter 1: The Power of Family: Examining Familial Expectations and Their Impact on Personal Growth

Adeline Yen Mah's relationship with her family forms the central conflict and driving force of her narratives. We will analyze Mah's experiences with racism and cultural misunderstandings, highlighting the emotional toll of navigating a world that often fails to accommodate her unique bicultural identity. The chapter explores the concept of hybridity and its relevance to individuals navigating multicultural experiences. Case studies will illustrate the diverse challenges faced by individuals negotiating multiple cultural identities, demonstrating the universality of Mah's experiences, even as they remain deeply rooted in her specific cultural context. This will also touch upon the impact of colonialism and its lingering effects on cultural identity and self-perception.
