We all have our “dragons.” These aren't literal monsters but rather the internal obstacles—fear, self-doubt, limiting beliefs—that prevent us from reaching our full potential. This introductory chapter sets the stage by exploring the nature of these inner dragons. It defines what constitutes a limiting belief, provides examples from various life aspects (career, relationships, personal growth), and establishes the connection between these beliefs and feelings of inadequacy or fear. We'll examine how these dragons manifest as procrastination, avoidance, or settling for less than we deserve. The key is understanding that these dragons are not insurmountable; they are challenges to be faced and overcome. This chapter lays the foundation for the journey Alexander, and the reader, will undertake.
