Introduction: Setting the Stage – The Andrea Doria and her final voyage

The Andrea Doria, a majestic Italian ocean liner, represented the pinnacle of luxury travel in the mid-20th century. Launched in 1951, she was a symbol of Italian elegance and engineering prowess. Her maiden voyage was a triumph, and she quickly became a favorite among transatlantic travelers.

However, her glamorous career ended abruptly on the night of July 25, 1956, when she collided with the Swedish-American liner Stockholm off the coast of Nantucket. This chapter delves into the Andrea Doria's history, her design, and the circumstances leading up to her final voyage, setting the stage for the tragedy to come.
