Storyline/Structure:

The novel follows Elara, a disillusioned artist living in a modern city, whose life is shattered when she discovers a hidden family journal detailing her ancestors' connection to the Myenne Ng – mythical bone fairies who are intrinsically linked to the health of the ancient Redwood forest. The journal reveals a prophecy foretelling the forest's destruction and the bone fairies' demise unless a descendant can reawaken their dormant power.

The story unfolds in two parallel narratives: Elara's present-day struggle to understand her heritage and navigate the increasingly urgent environmental crisis, and flashbacks revealing the history of her family's relationship with the Myenne Ng, stretching back centuries. Elara must journey to the Redwood forest, decipher cryptic clues hidden within the ancient trees, and confront powerful forces – both human and supernatural – who seek to exploit the forest for their own gain. Her journey will involve learning ancient rituals, facing perilous trials, and ultimately confronting her own deepest fears and insecurities. The climax involves a magical confrontation that will determine the fate of the forest and the bone fairies.
